

STUDENT-RUN CAFE PERKS UP CHS FACULTY, STAFF

On select Fridays during second semester at Conant High School, a group of students arrive at school at 6:30 a.m. dressed in bright blue uniforms ready to open and prepare for Cougar Perk, a student-run café that serves coffee and baked goods to faculty and staff.

Cougar Perk is part of the Business Education and Family and Consumer Sciences (FACS) departments modeled after the same course at Schaumburg High School. Students are part of the year-long course and learn about entrepreneurship and all aspects of running a business.

“One of the best things about Cougar Perk is these are kids that might not be connected to school in another way, these are not athletes, these are not kids who are necessarily involved in clubs, these are kids who in another class might totally be shy or don’t participate,” said Angela Drenth, family and consumer sciences department chair. “In this class, you really see the pride they take in what they do.”

Drenth teaches the FACS side of the course, along with Business Education Teacher Patti Ertl, who teaches the business side of the course first semester. In Ertl’s class, students discuss everything about the backend of a business, such as starting off, marketing, budgeting, customer service, and financing a business. From there, Drenth takes over second semester where students learn about the food side of running the café, such as preparing the food, menu planning, presentation, and cooking.

Cougar Perk started three years ago with seed money from a District 211 Foundation Grant of $1,000. Each food item is $1 and drink items are $1.50. Any proceeds automatically get put back into the business for the next week. During second semester, the café is open every Friday morning before school starts in the faculty cafeteria. Some key items that always sell are bacon quiche tarts, cinnamon rolls, and parfaits.

“We probably go through about 10 pots of coffee, 80 bacon quiche tarts, 30 cinnamon rolls, and 50 parfaits, so we’re serving a good amount of people,” Drenth said.

What Drenth and Ertl said is so great about a course like this is the support they receive from the CHS administration and staff, in addition to watching their students gain real-world experience they can certainly use outside of the classroom.

“Every month during first semester, students work on a promotional food items with Angela because the bakery isn’t run until second semester,” Ertl said. “The staff is all over us and they always want Cougar Perk, so we want to keep the memory of it out there until second semester.”

Seniors Christina and Alexandra Cruz have been a part of Cougar Perk for multiple school years, and said in addition to other plans they have after graduation, opening their own bakery someday would be something they are interested in. A lot of the knowledge they learned from Cougar Perk makes the sisters feel like they could open their own bakery someday.

“This is my third year, and what I like is interacting with the teachers and getting to know them,” Alexandra said. “Just the experience of being able to know a bakery on the business side, and to know how much production we need to put out there for baked goods and how to work with other people,” Christina added.

Not only does Cougar Perk open its café on Fridays in the faculty cafeteria, it also does catering and deliveries. They have catered several after school events and administrative meetings. This teaches students to plan not only for what they need during the actual café on Fridays, but also for extra events and deliveries. The class also went on a field trip to see real bakeries in action. This year, they went to three bakeries in Chicago where they were able to speak to business owners and chefs to see how what they learn in Cougar Perk can be applied to the workforce.

Drenth and Ertl said many of their colleagues ask if Cougar Perk can run during both semesters, instead of just one. Although they said they would love too, there is a lot of work that goes into it. Each year, the group of students that does Cougar Perk is new. Some students repeat the course because they enjoy it, but many students are new to the course and generally haven’t been exposed to entrepreneurial skills yet.

“What keeps faculty coming back each week is seeing one of the kids they might have in class who never participates. They can see them on our service line smiling,” Drenth said. “They are kind of like a little family. They are doing such a nice job running a business, giving feedback and really taking ownership over their bakery. It’s not something that we need to force, and they do a fantastic job meeting expectations.”
